

ARE THEY PAID FOR?

Tailors Want You to Pay For Your Trousers.

WITHIN SIXTY LONG DAYS

If You Don't, Then a "Bogie" in the Shape of a "Bogie" Will Chase Your Credit.

Have you paid for your new spring suit? If you haven't, the Grand Rapids Merchant Tailors' association will get you if you don't watch out. In the language of the day, it's on you and after you. The M. T. A. is coming next. In fact, it isn't fully and completely organized yet, but it will be next Thursday night. The clothing men believe that sixty days is long enough for any man to settle for his garments, whether they be three-piece suits or four-in-hand neckties. Fourteen of the leading tailors and dealers in furnishing goods met in Stew's last night to talk the matter over.

A. Holland was chosen temporary chairman, and Albert Schneider recorded the minutes on a new R. & W. card. The following names were remembered: Frank M. Williams, B. Horn, Shattuck & Towbridge, Schneider Bros. & Co., Berry, Mills & Co., Bodenstein Bros., Buffalo Clothing Co., Gardiner & Baxter, A. Holland, R. Allen, Model Hat Store, Louis Sandler, William J. McKinley, O. Baumister.

After something over two hours of discussion it was unanimously agreed that a protective association is necessary. When the tailors compared notes it was found that there were scores of patriots and plebeians in the city—members of the M. T. A. and the M. T. A. who treat their tailor and their conscience in the same manner. The clothing men did not mind carrying the accounts for a few months, but when it became a Kathleen Mavorneen affair they thought it time to draw the line. A secretary will be employed, and when a man has not paid for his clothes at the end of sixty days, he will be reported. Then he gets no more "tick" until he squares the account.

HE KNEW HIM WELL

Senator Stockbridge Speaks of Stanford's Virtues.

HE LOVED GOOD HORSES

Mr. S. For One Sentence and Stockbridge's Proposition—Mrs. Stockbridge—The Silver Question.

"I knew Senator Stanford well," said Senator Francis B. Stockbridge of Kalamazoo, who is in the city for a few days with his family. "He was one of the most genial, comfortable men I ever knew. We kept but a short distance apart and I frequently spent evenings in his home talking over business matters. The senator was an enthusiastic lover of fine horses and when he began discussing his theories in regard to breeding, everything else in the world became of secondary importance. Men who sent their cards to him and asked to see him about political or business matters were told that the senator was in very busy mood and can't see you at present." He cared little for fast horses because they were fast; but he liked to breed them and test his theories in improving the breed. Senator Stanford was an impulsive, enthusiastic man in whatever he undertook. Some of his political ideas were peculiar and idiosyncratic. He believed in the 2 per cent loan scheme, and frequently talked it over with me. One day while discussing it, I suggested that he take some of his own money and experiment. "Suppose you take $10,000,000," said I, "and loan it under those conditions. I have 50,000 acres of Michigan stump land myself, and would gladly take part of your money under the terms you propose."

It looked different.

"Oh, well," said he frankly, "you know those things all look different when brought immediately home to a man."

"Mrs. Stanford is as thoroughly generous as her husband," I believe she is one of the noblest, most amiable and charitable women that ever lived. She was constantly engaged in charitable work while in Washington. She confessed to Mrs. Stockbridge one day that she had given away something like $100,000 a year for several years. Few women in Washington or anywhere else can say that truthfully. But there is no sweeter, nobler character in the world than hers."

Senator Stockbridge expressed himself as in favor of the repeal of the Sherman silver law. "I am willing to agree to any wise statute that the party in power may offer. I do not intend to oppose any beneficial measure that the democracy may propose. It is evident that the Sherman law is partly responsible at least for the present condition of the money market. Mr. Cleveland is perhaps a little slow about calling an extra session, but he may wish to be sure of his ground. It is possible, you know, that the longer Mr. Maxwell continues his work, the more favorable many democratic congressmen may be to any plan the president proposes."

DEATH IN ITS SPELL

John Mead Swallows an Overdose of Chloral.

From an overdose of chloral John A. B. Mead died at 5:45 yesterday morning at the residence of his aunt, Mrs. A. B. Watson, corner of East Fulton and Sheldon street.

Saturday morning Mr. Mead returned from a trip to Chicago, where he had been to visit his brother, James A. Mead. Sunday night he was taken ill and went to bed. The following noon he was attacked with nausea, severe pains in the stomach and bowels and intense pain in the back of his head. Dr. H. C. Brigham, the family physician, was called. The doctor noticed that the patient's face was flushed and asked him if he had over exerted himself while in Chicago. He replied that he had not. The doctor did not consider he was in a serious condition, and after prescribing for him, departed, thinking that he would soon recover.

Mrs. Mead and Mrs. Watson remained in the room with him until about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, when he said he was feeling better and urged Mrs. Watson to retire. She went to her room and knew nothing more of the matter until she was called later.

About 4 o'clock he was taken worse. He said he experienced a strange sensation. He asked his wife to count his pulse, as it beat too rapidly. He wanted some medicine and asked his wife to accompany him to his laboratory to get it. He had made a study of chemistry and had quite a collection of chemicals and medicines. He poured a drug from a bottle into a glass in the presence of his wife and drank it. Mrs. Mead did not know the contents of the bottle. She assisted him to his room and he soon asked for a drink of lemonade, as he was afraid his stomach would not retain the medicine. When asked by his wife what he had taken he replied that he would not know if he could tell her.

Mrs. Mead at once awakened Mrs. Watson and telephoned for Dr. Brigham. This was about 4:30 a. m., and when the doctor arrived he stated that the patient was suffering from poison. The doctor at once called Dr. Miller, Sinclair and Groner, who arrived shortly afterwards. The physicians worked over the patient for nearly an hour, but were not successful in counteracting the effects of the drug. Investigation revealed the fact that the drug taken was chloral. Coroner Locher was summoned, but from the evidence at hand decided that no inquest was necessary. It is thought by those who investigated the matter and who were acquainted with the circumstances of the case that the unfortunate man was suffering from such intense pain in his head that he poured out a larger amount of the drug than he intended and the overdose was fatal.

These acquainted with the young man's business affairs say they can see no cause for the death being suicidal as he had met with no business reverses to their knowledge and his affairs were of the pleasantest nature.

The deceased was born at Newaygo, Sept. 24, 1863. Mrs. A. B. Watson was a sister to Mr. Mead's mother and when his mother died the children were adopted by the Watson family. Upon the death of the Hon. A. B. Watson, John and his brother, James A. and Willie W., and his sister, Mrs. Thomas F. Carroll, became heirs to the large estate. About four years ago he married Miss Helen Bishop, daughter of Col. E. R. Bishop, since which time they had resided in the palatial Watson residence, where he died. In partnership with his brother James he had been engaged in the lumber and real estate business. He was esteemed as a young man of good habits by his associates and by a great number of friends.

The deceased leaves no children. For the last few years he had acted as manager of the Watson estate. The arrangements for the funeral have been completed in the family home waiting for an answer from his brother James who perhaps had started from Chicago for the west on an intended trip for his health. The second brother, William, is attending school in Philadelphia.

Browned White Death.

James, Mich., June 22.—A German on an air line engine this morning discovered the dead body of Mrs. George Drury lying in fourteen inches of water in the river close to the bridge. The corpse will be an inquest. Mrs. Drury was a good deal younger than the man and was seen about the night of a storm when she was talking to herself. She lived with her father on South Park avenue, her husband having died two years ago. It is supposed she lost her way and fell into the water or was carried there. She was about 50 years old and leaves children.

APLENDU INDEMNEMENTS.

A Popular Book and What Man Can Said About It.

Beacon Learning, L. L. D., the distinguished historian, has said that Miss Holley, more familiarly known to a loving public as Samantha, Josiah Allen's wife, is a wise and efficient reformer, an ardent and able philosopher, a consummate humorist, and a most skillful lawyer of special phrases of social life everywhere to be seen. Her "epicurean" sermons are dramatic and incisive; her philosophy is self-demonstrative and her humor always has beneficence and not mere wit as a means to his points. Her book, "Samantha at Saratoga," is a social and not so keenly satirical, like "Servant who set all Europe a-laughing the tomfooleries of chivalry out of existence; like Holmes who, by a patriotic little poem, saved the frigate Constitution from destruction; like Whitaker who dismissed from our statute books a barbarous law by the burning words of the "Prisoner for Debt;" like Mrs. Stowe who pierced the heart of the institution to slavery by her pen; Miss Holley's books are doing in a quiet way a great work for the promotion of needed social reforms. I know of no volume more healthful for personal by the old and the young, the learned and the unlearned.

Bishop J. P. Newman has written as follows of that great book, "Samantha at Saratoga" by Marietta Holley, more familiarly known as Josiah Allen's wife: "I commend 'Samantha at Saratoga' as an antidote for the blues, a cure-all for any kind of mental wear, a recreation from intellectual taxation, a provocation for wholesome laughter and an inspiration to Goldilocks. It is the bitterest satire sugar-coated with the sweetness of exhilarating fun; it is as laughable as a fashionable folly; it is exalted wit with scalpel in one hand and the Balm of Gilead in the other. Her personality is intense, her genius immense, her art perfect. She stands alone in her chosen sphere without a rival."
